Michigan Health Council Recognizes Davenport for New Education Program
College of Health Professions Wins Health Council Award for Innovative Training Program

Okemos, Mich., Nov. 20, 2012—The Michigan Health Council recognized Davenport University for its efforts to create flexible opportunities to complete Health Information Management degrees with a Building Michigan’s Health Care Workforce Education and Training Award. T.J. Hunt, Associate Dean for Health Information Management, and Dr. Karen Daley, Dean of College of Health Professions, accepted the award on behalf of the university.

“We are thrilled to honor the Health Information Management program with our Education and Training S Award,” said Michigan Health Council President and CEO, Anne Rosewarne. “Health care reform and the looming retirement of baby boomers will require thousands of new health care professionals in Michigan. Davenport’s Health Information Management program is a great example of a creative way to train new health care professionals.”

“I’m honored to accept the award on behalf of Davenport University,” said Hunt. “Davenport has one of few HIM accredited programs in Michigan and we work hard to ensure our students are ready to be the health care professionals of tomorrow.”

The Michigan Health Council created the Building Michigan Health Care Workforce Awards in 2008 to recognize the efforts Michigan health care employers and professional make to expand, diversify, and improve the quality of Michigan’s health care workforce.
